

No. 90233-0

SUPREME COURT
OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

No. 71360-4-I

COURT OF APPEALS, DIVISION ONE
OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

KENT L. DAVIS ET AL.,

Petitioners,

v.

GRACE COX ET AL.,

Respondents.

APPEAL FROM THURSTON COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT
THE HONORABLE WM. THOMAS MCPHEE

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE REPORTERS COMMITTEE FOR FREEDOM OF THE PRESS AND 29 OTHERS IN SUPPORT OF RESPONDENTS GRACE COX ET AL.

Jessica L. Goldman, WSBA
#21856
SUMMIT LAW GROUP, PLLC
315 Fifth Ave South, Suite 1000
Seattle, WA 98104
Tel: (206) 676-7000
Fax: (206) 676-7001

Bruce D. Brown, D.C. Bar #457317
Executive Director
THE REPORTERS COMMITTEE
FOR FREEDOM OF THE PRESS
1101 Wilson Blvd., Suite 1100
Arlington, VA 22209
Tel: (703) 807-2102

ATTORNEYS FOR AMICI CURIAE

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	ii
IDENTITY AND INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE	1
INTRODUCTION	11
STATEMENT OF THE CASE	12
ARGUMENT	13
I. The Washington anti-SLAPP law is consistent with a long-standing national trend of protecting speakers from frivolous suits meant to silence their speech.	13
II. The mechanisms that the statute provides to dispose of meritless SLAPP suits are constitutionally sound.	19
A. RCW 4.24.525’s burden-shifting provision does not violate separation of powers or the right of access to the courts.	19
B. RCW 4.24.525’s discovery stay does not infringe the rights of petition or of access to the courts.	22
C. RCW 4.24.525’s fee-shifting and mandatory damages provisions do not violate the rights of petition or of access to the courts because there is no right to bring a meritless lawsuit.	24
CONCLUSION	31
CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE	32

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Akrie v. Grant, 178 Wn. App. 506, 315 P.3d 567 (2013) 12, 20, 30

Am. Legion Post No. 149 v. Dep't of Health, 164 Wn.2d 570,
32 P.3d 1016 (2008) 30

Anderson Dev. Co. v. Tobias, 116 P.3d 323 (Utah 2005)..... 12

BE & K Constr. Co. v. NLRB, 536 U.S. 516 (2002)..... 25

Bill Johnson's Restaurants, Inc. v. NLRB, 461 U.S. 731 (1983) .25, 26, 28

California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404
U.S. 508 (1972) 25, 26, 27, 28

Chambers v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 207 U.S. 142 (1907) 25

Christopher v. Harbury, 536 U.S. 403 (2002)..... 25, 26

Collier v. City of Tacoma, 121 Wn.2d 737, 854 P.2d 1046
(1993) 30

Davis v. Cox, 180 Wn. App. 514, 325 P.3d 255 (2014) 20

Dillon v. Seattle Deposition Reporters, LLC, 179 Wn. App.
41, 316 P.3d 1119 (2014)..... 12, 20

Eastern Railroad Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127 (1961) 27

Equilon Enters. v. Consumer Cause, Inc., 24 Cal Rptr. 2d 507
(Cal. App. 2002)..... 12

Flores v. Emerich & Fike, 285 Fed. Appx. 728, 2010 WL
2640625 (9th Cir. June 29, 2010)..... 22

Foster v. Lake Jackson, 28 F.3d 425 (5th Cir. 1994)..... 26

Gertz v. Robert Welch , 418 U.S. 323 (1974)	21
Giboney v. Empire Storage Co. , 336 U.S. 490 (1949).....	28
Gilman v. MacDonald , 74 Wn. App. 733, 875 P.2d 697 (1994)	17
Guam Greyhound Inc. v. Brizill , No. CVA07-021, 2008 WL 4206682 (Guam Terr. Sept. 11, 2008).....	12
Harris v. Adkins , 432 W.E.2d 549 (W. Va. 1993).....	15
Herron v. Tribune Pub. Co. , 108 Wn.2d 162, 736 P.2d 249 (1987)	21
Hometown Props., Inc. v. Fleming , 680 A.2d 56 (R.I. 1996).....	12
Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publ'g Co. , 44 Cal Rptr. 2d 46 (Cal. App. 1995).....	12
Lee v. Pennington , 830 So. 2d 1037 (La. Ct. App. 2002).....	12
Murray v. Giarratano , 492 U.S. 1 (1989).....	25
NAACP v. Button , 371 U.S. 415 (1963).....	28
New York Times Co. v. Sullivan , 376 U.S. 254 (1964).....	20, 21
Nexus v. Swift , 785 N.W.2d 771 (Minn. Ct. App. 2010)	12
Pennsylvania v. Finley , 481 U.S. 551 (1987)	25
Protect Our Mountain Env't Dist. Court , 677 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1984).....	15
Royce v. Willowbrook Cemetery, Inc. , No. X08CV010185694, 2003 WL 431909 (Conn. Super. Ct. Feb. 3, 2003)	15
Sandholm v. Kuecker , 942 N.E.2d 544 (2010)	12
Smith v. Bennett , 365 U.S. 708 (1961).....	26

State v. Karas , 108 Wn. App. 692, 32 P.3d 1016 (2001)	22, 23, 24
United Mine Workers of America v. Pennington , 381 U.S. 657 (1965)	27
Wolfe v. George , 486 F.3d 1120 (9th Cir. 2007)	30
Wolff v. McDonnell , 418 U.S. 539 (1974)	25
Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank , 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694 (Cal. App. 1997).....	29

Statutes

27 Pa. Const. Stat. Ann. §§ 7707, 9301–8303 (West 2014)	15
735 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 110/115–110/25 (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
Act of May 5, 1989, 1989 Wash. Sess. Laws 1119 (codified as amended at Wash. Rev. Code § 4.24.510 (2011))	16, 17
Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 12-751–12-752 (LexisNexis 2014)	14
Ark. Code Ann. §§ 16-63-501–16-63-508 (2014).....	14
Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §391.1 (Deering 2014).....	29
Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §425.16 (Deering 2014).....	14, 16
D.C. Code §16-5501 (2014).....	14
Del. Code Ann. tit. 10, §§ 8136–8138 (2014)	14
Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 720.304(4), 768.295 (LexisNexis2014).....	14
Ga. Code Ann. §§ 9-11-11.1, 51-5-7(4) (2014).....	14
Guam Code Ann. tit. 7 §§ 17101–17109 (2014)	14
Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 634F-1–634F-4 (LexisNexis 2014)	14

Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 634J-1–634J-7 (LexisNexis 2014).....	29
Ind. Code Ann. §§ 34-7-7-1–34-7-7-10 (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 971 (2013).....	15
Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 231, §59H (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
Md. Code Ann., Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 5-807 (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 14, §556 (2014).....	15
Minn. Stat. Ann. §§ 554.01–554.05 (2014).....	15
Mo. Ann. Stat. §537.528 (2014).....	15
N.M. Stat. Ann. §38-2-9.1 (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
N.Y. Civ. Rights Law §§ 70-1, 76-a (Consol. 2014).....	15
N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3211(g) (Consol. 2014).....	15
Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 25-21, 241–25-21, 246 (2014).....	15
Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 41.637, 41.650–41.670 (LexisNexis 2013).....	15
Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, § 1443.1 (West 2013).....	15
Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 31.150–31.155 (West 2014).....	15
R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. §§ 9-33-1–9-33-4 (West 2014).....	15
Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 4-21-1001–4-21-1004 (2014).....	15
Tex Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code Ann. §§ 11.001–11.104 (Vernon 2013).....	29
Tex Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code Ann. §§ 27-001–27.011 (Vernon 2013).....	15

Utah Code Ann. §§ 78B-6-1401–78B-6-1405 (LexisNexis 2014).....	15
Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, §1041 (2014)	15
Wash. Rev. Code Ann. §§ 4.24.510–4.24.525 (LexisNexis 2014).....	passim
Wash. Rev. Code Ann. §§ 42.17A.335 (LexisNexis 2014).....	21

Other Sources

Carson Barylak, Note, Reducing Uncertainty in Anti-SLAPP Protection , 71 OHIO ST. L.J. 845 (2010)	13, 14
Citizen Participation Act, H.R. 746, 2011–2012 Leg., Reg. Sess. (N.C. 2011).....	15
Citizen Participation Act of 2009, H.R. 4364, 111 th Cong. (2009)	15
Frank H. Easterbrook, Discovery as Abuse , 69 B.U. L. REV. 635 (1989)	22
George W. Pring & Penelope Canan, Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation , 35 SOC. PROBS. 506 (1988)	13
George W. Pring & Penelope Canan, Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation ("SLAPPs"): An Introduction for Bench, Bar and Bystanders , 12 BRIDGEPORT L. REV. 937, 947-48 (1992).....	13
H.R. 5036, 95th Leg., Reg. Sess. (Mich. 2009).....	15
Joint Brief of Dillon and Akrie RE Constitutionality of RCW 4.24.525 at 6, Dillon v. Seattle Deposition Reporters, LLC , 316 P.3d 1119 (2014), Akrie v. Grant , 180 Wn.2d 1008 (2014)	20
Michael Johnson, A Better SLAPP Trap: Washington State’s Enhanced Statutory Protection for Targets of “Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation", 38 GONZ. L. REV.

263 (2003)26

IDENTITY AND INTEREST OF AMICI

The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press (“RCFP”) is a voluntary, unincorporated association of reporters and editors that works to defend the First Amendment rights and freedom of information interests of the news media. RCFP has provided representation, guidance and research in First Amendment and Freedom of Information Act litigation since 1970. As set forth in the accompanying motion for leave to file this brief, RCFP has a strong interest in ensuring that anti-SLAPP statutes like the one at issue in this case serve their objective of providing journalists, publishers and others with an immediate means to dispose of lawsuits brought to chill speech about matters of public interest and concern.

Allied Daily Newspapers of Washington is a Washington not-for-profit association representing 24 daily newspapers serving Washington, as well as the Washington bureaus of the Associated Press. Allied Daily Newspapers was a key supporter of the legislation that led to the Washington anti-SLAPP statute.

With some 500 members, American Society of News Editors (“ASNE”) is an organization that includes directing editors of daily newspapers throughout the Americas. ASNE changed its name in April 2009 to American Society of News Editors and approved broadening its membership to editors of online news providers and academic leaders.

Founded in 1922 as American Society of Newspaper Editors, ASNE is active in a number of areas of interest to top editors with priorities on improving freedom of information, diversity, readership and the credibility of newspapers.

Association of Alternative Newsmedia (“AAN”) is a not-for-profit trade association for 130 alternative newspapers in North America, including weekly papers like The Village Voice and Washington City Paper. AAN newspapers and their websites provide an editorial alternative to the mainstream press. AAN members have a total weekly circulation of seven million and a reach of over 25 million readers.

The Association of American Publishers, Inc. (“AAP”) is the national trade association of the U.S. book publishing industry. AAP’s members include most of the major commercial book publishers in the United States, as well as smaller and nonprofit publishers, university presses and scholarly societies. AAP members publish hardcover and paperback books in every field, educational materials for the elementary, secondary, postsecondary and professional markets, scholarly journals, computer software and electronic products and services. The Association represents an industry whose very existence depends upon the free exercise of rights guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Bloomberg L.P. operates Bloomberg News, a 24-hour global news service based in New York with more than 2,400 journalists in more than 150 bureaus around the world. Bloomberg supplies real-time business, financial, and legal news to the more than 319,000 subscribers to the Bloomberg Professional service world-wide and is syndicated to more than 1000 media outlets across more than 60 countries. Bloomberg television is available in more than 340 million homes worldwide and Bloomberg radio is syndicated to 200 radio affiliates nationally. In addition, Bloomberg publishes Bloomberg Businessweek, Bloomberg Markets and Bloomberg Pursuits magazines with a combined circulation of 1.4 million readers and Bloomberg.com and Businessweek.com receive more than 24 million visitors each month. In total, Bloomberg distributes news, information, and commentary to millions of readers and listeners each day, and has published more than one hundred million stories.

The California Newspaper Publishers Association ("CNPA") is a nonprofit trade association representing the interests of nearly 850 daily, weekly and student newspapers throughout California. For over 130 years, CNPA has worked to protect and enhance the freedom of speech guaranteed to all citizens and to the press by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article 1, Section 2 of the California Constitution. CNPA has dedicated its efforts to protect the free flow of information concerning government institutions in order for newspapers to fulfill their constitutional role in our democratic society and to advance the interest of all Californians in the transparency of government operations.

The E.W. Scripps Company is a diverse, 131-year-old media enterprise with interests in television stations, newspapers, local news and information websites and licensing and syndication. The company's portfolio of locally focused media properties includes: 19 TV stations (ten ABC affiliates, three NBC affiliates, one independent and five Spanish-language stations); daily and community newspapers in 13 markets; and the Washington-based Scripps Media Center, home of the Scripps Howard News Service.

Forbes LLC is the publisher of Forbes and other leading magazines, including Forbes Life and Forbes Asia, as well as an array of investment newsletters and the leading business website, Forbes.com. Forbes has been covering American and global business since 1917.

Gannett Co., Inc. is an international news and information company that publishes more than 80 daily newspapers in the United States – including USA TODAY – which reach 11.6 million readers daily. The company's broadcasting portfolio includes more than 40 TV stations, reaching approximately one-third of all television households in America. Each of Gannett's daily newspapers and TV stations operates Internet sites offering news and advertising that is customized for the market served and integrated with its publishing or broadcasting operations. KING-5, a major Seattle television station, is owned by Gannett.

Hearst Corporation is one of the nation's largest diversified media companies. Its major interests include the following: ownership of 15 daily and 38 weekly newspapers, including the Houston Chronicle, San Francisco Chronicle and Albany (N.Y.) Times Union; nearly 300 magazines around the world, including Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan and O, The Oprah Magazine; 29 television stations, which reach a combined 18% of U.S. viewers; ownership in leading cable networks, including Lifetime, A&E and ESPN; business publishing, including a joint venture interest in Fitch Ratings; and Internet businesses, television production, newspaper features distribution and real estate.

The Investigative Reporting Workshop, a project of the School of Communication (SOC) at American University, is a nonprofit, professional newsroom. The Workshop publishes in-depth stories at investigativereportingworkshop.org about government and corporate accountability, ranging widely from the environment and health to national security and the economy.

KIRO-TV, Channel 7, is a CBS-affiliated television station located in Seattle, Washington, serving Western Washington. It is a Cox Media Group Station.

KOMO-TV (Seattle) serves the Seattle metro market in western Washington. It is owned by Sinclair Broadcast Group, Inc.

The McClatchy Company, through its affiliates, is the third-largest newspaper publisher in the United States with 29 daily newspapers and related websites as well as numerous community newspapers and niche publications. McClatchy owns several newspapers in Washington, including the News Tribune, The Olympian, The Bellingham Herald, and the Tri-City Herald.

MediaNews Group's more than 800 multi-platform products reach 61 million Americans each month across 18 states.

The National Press Photographers Association (“NPPA”) is a 501(c)(6) non-profit organization dedicated to the advancement of visual journalism in its creation, editing and distribution. NPPA’s approximately 7,000 members include television and still photographers, editors, students and representatives of businesses that serve the visual journalism industry. Since its founding in 1946, the NPPA has vigorously promoted the constitutional rights of journalists as well as freedom of the press in all its forms, especially as it relates to visual journalism. The submission of this brief was duly authorized by Mickey H. Osterreicher, its General Counsel.

The New York Times Company is the publisher of The New York Times and The International Times, and operates the news website nytimes.com.

Newspaper Association of America (“NAA”) is a nonprofit organization representing the interests of more than 2,000 newspapers in the United States and Canada. NAA members account for nearly 90% of the daily newspaper circulation in the United States and a wide range of non-daily newspapers. The Association focuses on the major issues that affect today’s newspaper industry, including protecting the ability of the media to provide the public with news and information on matters of public concern.

North Jersey Media Group Inc. (“NJMG”) is an independent, family-owned printing and publishing company, parent of two daily newspapers serving the residents of northern New Jersey: The Record (Bergen County), the state’s second-largest newspaper, and the Herald News (Passaic County). NJMG also publishes more than 40 community newspapers serving towns across five counties and a family of glossy magazines, including (201) Magazine, Bergen County’s premiere magazine. All of the newspapers contribute breaking news, features, columns and local information to NorthJersey.com. The company also owns and publishes Bergen.com showcasing the people, places and events of Bergen County.

Online News Association (“ONA”) is the world’s largest association of online journalists. ONA’s mission is to inspire innovation and excellence among journalists to better serve the public. ONA’s more than 2,000 members include news writers, producers, designers, editors, bloggers, technologists, photographers, academics, students and others who produce news for the Internet or other digital delivery systems. ONA hosts the annual Online News Association conference and administers the Online Journalism Awards. ONA is dedicated to advancing the interests of digital journalists and the public generally by encouraging editorial integrity and independence, journalistic excellence and freedom of expression and access.

The Pacific Northwest Newspaper Association (PNNA) is an association of daily newspapers in Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah, Washington, Alberta and British Columbia advancing the newspaper industry through information, education and service.

The Public Participation Project (PPP) is working to pass federal anti-SLAPP legislation in Congress. PPP’s coalition of supporters includes numerous organizations and businesses, as well as prominent individuals that support federal anti-SLAPP legislation. PPP also assists in efforts to pass anti-SLAPP legislation in the states, and it monitors SLAPP developments in legislatures and courts across the country. PPP provides online educational resources, including compendia of state speech laws and First Amendment scholarship, and provides commentary on current SLAPP cases and legislation.

The Seattle Times Company, locally owned since 1896, publishes the daily newspaper The Seattle Times, together with The Issaquah Press, Yakima Herald-Republic, Walla Walla Union-Bulletin, Sammamish Review and Newcastle-News, all in Washington state.

With its 48 newspaper titles, Sound Publishing is the largest community media organization in Washington State. Its titles deliver relevant, local news that directly affects the lives of those who raise families and work in the 100+ communities it serves. Sound Publishing's Washington news products appear in print and digital formats that include the Daily Herald of Everett, the Peninsula Daily News, the alternative publication the Seattle Weekly, the Arlington Times, Marysville Globe, Auburn Reporter, Bellingham Business Journal, Herald Business Journal, La Raza Del Noroeste, Okanogan Valley Gazette-Tribune, Renton Reporter, Kent Reporter, Covington/Maple Valley Reporter, Bainbridge Island Review, Central Kitsap Reporter, North Kitsap Herald, Kingston Community News, Bonney Lake Courier Herald, Enumclaw Courier Herald, Bothell/Kenmore Reporter, Kirkland Reporter, Redmond Reporter, Federal Way Mirror, Forks Forum, Sequim Gazette, Journal of the San Juan Islands, Islands' Sounder, Islands' Weekly, Issaquah/Sammamish Reporter, Bellevue Reporter, Snoqualmie Valley Record, Mercer Island Reporter, South Whidbey Record, Whidbey News Times, Whidbey Examiner, Vashon-Maury Island Beachcomber, Aberdeen World, Montesano Vidette, The North Coast News and the South Beach Bulletin.

Stephens Media LLC is a nationwide newspaper publisher with operations from North Carolina to Hawaii. Its largest newspaper is the Las Vegas Review-Journal.

Time Inc. is the largest magazine publisher in the United States. It publishes over 90 titles, including Time, Fortune, Sports Illustrated, People, Entertainment Weekly, InStyle and Real Simple. Time Inc. publications reach over 100 million adults, and its websites, which attract more visitors each month than any other publisher, serve close to two billion page views each month.

The Tully Center for Free Speech began in Fall, 2006, at Syracuse University's S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications, one of the nation's premier schools of mass communications.

The Washington Newspaper Publishers Association is a statewide, non-profit trade association representing more than 120 community newspapers throughout Washington. It is dedicated to representing its members and defending the public's right to know about the conduct of public business.

The Washington State Association of Broadcasters is a Washington not-for-profit trade association whose members include local, free, over-the-air radio and television stations licensed to communities in the state of Washington. The Association provides, among other membership benefits, advocacy and legal guidance to its member radio and television stations regarding newsgathering and freedom of speech issues. The Association advocated strongly in favor of the adoption of the updated version of Washington's anti-SLAPP statute in 2010 before the Washington State Legislature.

INTRODUCTION

Washington's anti-SLAPP law, RCW 4.24.525, was the first part of a nationwide trend in the direction of limiting the devastating consequences which unfounded lawsuits can have on speakers. Mechanisms for early dismissal, fee-shifting provisions, and sanctions on irresponsible plaintiffs – all of which are included in RCW 4.24.525 – are common features of these laws. As the number of states enacting anti-

SLAPP laws has grown, some have been challenged as unconstitutional. But every court to adjudicate the constitutionality of an anti-SLAPP law has found the law to be valid.¹ This Court should hold, like each court which has come before it, that RCW 4.24.525 is a constitutional mechanism for disposing of speech-repressive lawsuits. Petitioner Kent Davis et al.’s [“Petitioners”] contentions that the burden-shifting, discovery stay, and fee-shifting and mandatory damages provisions violate the constitutional rights to petition and of access to the courts are without merit, and this Court should reject their claims. Amici know the Court is considering these issues in multiple cases and wish to weigh in on both the issues concerning the anti-SLAPP law raised in this case and elsewhere.²

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Amici reference and incorporate herein the Statement of the Case as set forth in the pleadings of the Respondents, Grace Cox et al. (“Respondents”).

¹ See Guam Greyhound Inc. v. Brizill, No. CVA07-021, 2008 WL 4206682 (Guam Terr. Sept. 11, 2008); Anderson Dev. Co. v. Tobias, 116 P.3d 323, 338 (Utah 2005); Equilon Enters. v. Consumer Cause, Inc., 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 (Cal. App. 2002); Hometown Props., Inc. v. Fleming, 680 A.2d 56 (R.I. 1996); Sandholm v. Kuecker, 942 N.E.2d 544 (2010); Nexus v. Swift, 785 N.W.2d 771 (Minn. Ct. App. 2010); Lee v. Pennington, 830 So. 2d 1037 (La. Ct. App. 2002); Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publ’g Co., 44 Cal Rptr. 2d 46 (Cal. App. 1995).

² Dillon v. Seattle Deposition Reporters, LLC, 179 Wn. App. 41, 316 P.3d 1119 (2014); Akrie v. Grant, 178 Wn. App. 506, 315 P.3d 567 (2013).

ARGUMENT

I. The Washington anti-SLAPP law is consistent with a long-standing nationwide trend of protecting speakers from frivolous suits meant to silence their speech.

The phenomenon of “strategic lawsuits against public participation” (“SLAPPs”) was first identified by two University of Denver professors in a series of articles in the 1980s and early 1990s. The term is a moniker for any “attempt[] to use civil tort action to stifle political expression.” George W. Pring & Penelope Canan, Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation, 35 SOC. PROBS. 506, 506-507 (1988) (conducting a study of attempts to use civil tort actions to stifle political activity). A SLAPP may come in the guise of any number of different causes of action, as “the traditional language of tort claims camouflages them among the hundreds of thousands of civil cases”³ brought annually in American courts. Id. at 507. All SLAPPs share a common feature, however, in that they are intended to chill constitutionally protected speech and petition activity. See Carson

³ Pring and Canan identified a number of torts which often serve as vehicles of SLAPPs. These include, among others, libel, interference with business or contract, malicious prosecution, conspiracy, nuisance, and invasion of privacy. See George W. Pring & Penelope Canan, Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation (“SLAPPs”): An Introduction for Bench, Bar and Bystanders, 12 BRIDGEPORT L REV. 937, 947-48 (1992) (hereinafter SLAPPs: An Introduction).

Barylak, Note, Reducing Uncertainty in Anti-SLAPP Protection, 71 OHIO ST. L.J. 845, 846-47 (2010).

A SLAPP plaintiff typically does not seek to have legitimate rights vindicated by a court, but rather to intimidate speakers and bury defendants under the weight of litigation expenses, removing them from the public debate. See supra SLAPPs: An Introduction at 939-944. Indeed, SLAPPs are rarely victorious and usually dismissed, but they achieve the plaintiff's goal of chilling citizen involvement and public participation in government. Id. at 944.

California enacted an anti-SLAPP statute in 1992 that became a model for other jurisdictions seeking to protect citizen participation in government from suppression via civil suit. See Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 425.16 (Deering 2014). In the two decades since California's enactment of its anti-SLAPP legislation, dozens of state legislatures, realizing the power of civil suits to stifle constitutionally protected activity, responded with anti-SLAPP legislation of their own. Twenty-eight states, along with the District of Columbia and the U.S. territory of Guam, now have some form of anti-SLAPP legislation.⁴ Moreover, courts in Colorado,

⁴ See Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 12-751–12-752 (LexisNexis 2014); Ark. Code Ann. §§ 16-63-501–16-63-508 (2014); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 425.16 (Deering 2014); Del. Code Ann. tit. 10, §§ 8136-8138 (2014); D.C. Code § 16-5501 (2014); Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 720.304(4), 768.295 (LexisNexis 2014); Ga. Code Ann. §§ 9-11-11.1, 51-5-7(4) (2014); Guam Code Ann. tit. 7 §§ 17101–17109 (2014); Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 634F-1–634F-4

Connecticut, and West Virginia – states without anti-SLAPP statutes – recognize a common-law defense to lawsuits that target acts aimed at petitioning the government for action on issues of public importance. See Protect Our Mountain Env't v. Dist. Court, 677 P.2d 1361, 1369 (Colo. 1984) (requiring that plaintiffs meet a “heightened standard” when evaluating a SLAPP under a defendant’s motion to dismiss premised on First Amendment protection of their activities); Royce v. Willowbrook Cemetery, Inc., No. X08CV010185694, 2003 WL 431909, at *2 (Conn. Super. Ct. Feb. 3, 2003) (identifying the standard in identifying and dismissing a SLAPP suit to be “objectively baseless in that no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits and ... conceal[ing] an effort to interfere improperly with the defendant’s rights”); Harris v. Adkins, 432 S.E.2d 549, 552 (W. Va. 1993) (ruling that the exercise of the constitutional right to petition the government cannot give rise to liability unless a plaintiff can show the defendant acted with actual malice).

(LexisNexis 2014); 735 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 110/15–110/25 (LexisNexis 2014); Ind. Code Ann. §§34-7-7-1–34-7-7-10 (LexisNexis 2014); La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 971 (2013); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 14, §556 (2014); Md. Code Ann., Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 5-807 (LexisNexis 2014); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 231, § 59H (LexisNexis 2014); Minn. Stat. Ann. §§ 554.01–554.05 (2014); Mo. Ann. Stat. § 537.528 (2014); Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 25-21, 241–25-21, 246 (2014); Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 41.637, 41.650–41.670 (LexisNexis 2013); N.M. Stat. Ann. §38-2-9.1 (LexisNexis 2014); N.Y. Civ. Rights Law §§70-a, 76-a (Consol. 2014); N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3211(g) (Consol. 2014); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, §1443.1 (West 2013); Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§31.150–31.155 (West 2014); 27 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. §§7707, 8301–8303 (West 2014); R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. §§ 9-33-1–9-33-4 (West 2014); Tenn. Code Ann. §§4-21-1001–4-21-1004 (2014); Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code Ann. §§27.001–27.011 (Vernon 2013); Utah Code Ann. §§78B-6-1401–78B-6-1405 (LexisNexis 2014); Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 12, §1041 (2014); Wash. Rev. Code Ann. §§ 4.24.510–4.24.525 (LexisNexis 2014). In addition, anti-SLAPP bills were introduced in the Michigan and North Carolina legislatures and the U.S. Congress in recent legislative sessions, but none has become law. See Citizen Participation Act, H.R. 746, 2011-2012 Leg., Reg. Sess. (N.C. 2011); Citizen Participation Act of 2009, H.R. 4364, 111th Cong. (2009); H.R. 5036, 95th Leg., Reg. Sess. (Mich. 2009).

In particular, the scope of protection offered by California's anti-SLAPP law expands the protection to include not just speech aimed at government bodies, but statements made in public forums on matters of public concern. This influence seems to be reflected in Washington's statute. Compare Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §425.16(b)(1) (subjecting to the special motion to strike any action "arising from ... the [defendant's] right of petition or free speech") with RCW 4.24.525(2), (2)(e) (applying to any claim involving "public participation and petition," defined, in relevant part, as any "lawful conduct in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of free speech in connection with an issue of public concern, or in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of petition").

While California's extension of an anti-SLAPP legislative remedy to speech as well as petition activity has been influential, Washington was the first state in the nation to enact anti-SLAPP legislation. Acting in response to a retaliatory lawsuit by a real estate company against a young mother who reported the company's hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid taxes, the state legislature passed the Brenda Hill Bill in 1989. See Act of May 5, 1989, 1989 Wash. Sess. Laws 1119 (codified as amended at RCW 4.24.510 (2014)). This early anti-SLAPP law provided immunity from civil liability to those who “in good faith communicate[]” complaints to a federal, state or local agency “reasonably of concern” to that agency. 1989 Wash. Sess. Laws 1119-20.

While the Brenda Hill Bill did not include a mechanism for the early dismissal of SLAPPs, it did contain a burden-shifting mechanism that would be incorporated into later anti-SLAPP laws. In Gilman v. MacDonald, 74 Wn. App. 733 738-39, 875 P.2d 697 (1994), this Court analogized the immunity granted by the Brenda Hill Bill in a defamation case to a common law qualified privilege. This Court held that when a defendant in a defamation suit claims immunity under the statute, “the burden is on the defamed party to show by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant did not act in good faith.” Id. In effect, the plaintiff was required to show by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant acted with actual malice – “they knew of the falsity of the communications or acted with reckless disregard as to their falsity.” Id.

Various gaps in the law’s protection were corrected, most recently in 2010 with the enactment of RCW 4.24.525. This latest iteration of the state’s anti-SLAPP statute has three critical features which allow courts to expeditiously dispose of SLAPPs.

First, the law provides for a motion to strike lawsuits arising out of protected speech or petition activity upon an initial preponderance showing by the defendants. The judge will grant the motion to dismiss the complaint unless plaintiffs can show by clear and convincing evidence a probability of success on the merits. RCW 4.24.525(4). Second, a defendant's filing of a special motion to strike triggers a stay of discovery until the court rules on the special motion to strike, although the court may order specified discovery "for good cause shown." RCW 4.24.525(5)(c). Third, service of a special motion to strike the complaint triggers an expedited schedule of judicial review, which the court will hear within 30 days "unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing." RCW 4.24.525(5)(a). The court must then issue its decision within seven days after the hearing. RCW 4.24.525(5)(b). The special motion, discovery stay and expedited review schedule ensures that both the court system and SLAPP defendants have the opportunity to quickly and efficiently dispose of meritless cases before expending resources complying with costly and time-consuming discovery orders and addressing pending motions.

II. The mechanisms that the statute provides to dispose of meritless SLAPP suits are constitutionally sound.

The mechanisms in RCW 4.24.525 work in concert to relieve defendants subject to SLAPP lawsuits arising out of constitutionally protected activity from the burdensome financial strain of defending the suit. As states across the country have recognized, anti-SLAPP laws are a judicially efficient means of protecting the rights of speakers and of protecting the misuse of the courts. They do not inhibit the First Amendment rights of plaintiffs because a SLAPP – by definition – is a meritless lawsuit which a plaintiff has no right to bring. Washington’s law, and anti-SLAPP laws more broadly, are instead a valuable shield to be used to protect the First Amendment rights of speakers. Petitioner Davis’s contentions that the burden-shifting, discovery stay, and fee-shifting/sanctions provisions violate his First Amendment rights are without merit and should be rejected.

A. RCW 4.24.525’s burden-shifting provision does not violate separation of powers or the right of access to the courts.

Amici note that Respondents have ably established the constitutionality of the burden-shifting provision of RCW 4.24.525. We write additionally to emphasize that the requirement of the plaintiff to “establish by clear and convincing evidence a probability of prevailing” in order to proceed with the SLAPP suit is not unprecedented. Petitioners make much of the conjunction of the “clear and convincing” and “probability” standards to claim that that provision is both void for vagueness and violates the right of access to courts and trial by jury. Furthermore, the plaintiffs in Dillon and Akrie argue that the “clear and convincing” standard was unconstitutional because it was too high.⁵ On the contrary, both the “clear and convincing” and probability standards are commonly used in the evidentiary standards of other immunities, specifically in the First Amendment realm, to the point where it is not confusing or unconstitutional to use them together, as the Court of Appeals in Dillon was able to do and as the Court of Appeals considering this case understood. See Dillon, 179 Wn. App. at 86; see Davis v. Cox, 180 Wn. App. 514, 546-47, 325 P.3d 255 (2014).

The important privileges protected by the First Amendment require that a rigorous evidentiary threshold be reached before they can be overcome. The seminal case New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964), established a requirement of “convincing clarity which the constitutional standard demands” before a defamation defendant may be found to have actual malice and therefore be liable. Id. at 285-86.

⁵ See Joint Brief of Dillon and Akrie RE Constitutionality of RCW 4.24.525 at 6, Dillon v. Seattle Deposition Reporters, LLC, 179 Wn. App. 41, 316 P.3d 1119 (2014), Akrie v. Grant, 178 Wn. App. 506, 315 P.3d 567 (2013). It should also be noted that Dillon and Akrie also singled out a statement of the Reporters Committee in the amicus brief filed in that case, stating that because amici had stated that RCW 4.24.525 disposes of weak cases as early and cost-effectively as possible, amici were admitting that the statute barred not only sham cases but non-sham cases that were weak. See id. at 12. They misconstrue amici’s meaning. Amici equate the meaning of “weak” with the meanings “sham” and “meritless.”

Subsequent cases interpreted New York Times v. Sullivan to call for “clear and convincing proof” that the defendant acted with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard for the truth. See, e.g., Gertz v. Robert Welch, 418 U.S. 323, 342 (1974). That standard has been applied consistently in federal court and in similar state laws governing defamation ever since. See, e.g., Herron v. Tribune Pub. Co., 108 Wn.2d 162, 169-70, 736 P.2d 249 (1987) (requiring clear and convincing evidence to prove actual malice). There are also many examples of how Washington has adopted the “clear and convincing” standard for laws of its own implicating the First Amendment. One such law is RCW 42.17A.335, which governs liability for sponsoring political advertising made with actual malice. Violation of that section must be proven with clear and convincing evidence. See Wash. Rev. Code §42.17A.335 (LexisNexis 2014).

It is nothing new for legislatures and courts to protect the privileges of the First Amendment by requiring clear and convincing evidence to overturn them. That well-established standard is not difficult for courts to understand even when combined with the “probability of prevailing” standard. RCW 4.24.525 should not be struck down on these grounds.

B. RCW 4.24.525's discovery stay does not infringe the rights of petition or of access to the courts.

Petitioners' argument rests on the premise that Cox's use of the anti-SLAPP statute forces plaintiff to make a pre-discovery showing of a likelihood of success on its claim by clear and convincing evidence. But this argument is unavailing. The lack of discovery does not necessarily signal denial of a constitutional right. See State v. Karas, 108 Wn. App. 692, 32 P.3d 1016 (2001) (rejecting a petitioner's argument that a conviction for violating a protection order violated his procedural due process rights because the order was put in place without discovery). Discovery remains "a party-driven process," Flores v. Emerich & Fike, 285 Fed. Appx. 728, 2010 WL 2640625, at *2 (9th Cir. June 29, 2010), and even a "war of attrition subject to myriad abuses." Frank H. Easterbrook, Discovery as Abuse, 69 B.U. L. REV. 635 (1989).

In Karas, the Court of Appeals considered the constitutionality of the Domestic Violence Prevention Act, Chapter 26.50 RCW ("DVPA"). The DVPA allowed for a petition for an order for protection in cases of domestic violence. See Karas, 108 Wn. App. at 696-98. The petition was required to be accompanied by a sworn affidavit in support. Id. After service on the other party, the court would then hold a hearing within 24 days, at which both parties could testify but for which no discovery was provided. Id. at 698. The petitioner in Karas violated the protection order and was convicted.

The Court of Appeals rejected Karas’s argument that the lack of discovery at the petition hearing created a constitutional defect in the protection order which would void his later conviction. Id. Initially, the Court noted that nothing in the statute prevented Karas from seeking discovery, although it was not provided for, which is similarly true for the discovery stay in the anti-SLAPP statute. Compare id. (“Further, we note that the Act does not preclude a party from seeking discovery”), with RCW 4.24.525(5)(c) (“Notwithstanding the stay imposed by this subsection, the court, on motion and for good cause shown, may order that specified discovery or other hearings or motions be conducted.”). The Court also looked to the broader social value served by the DVPA: preventing both the violence directly caused in domestic abuse situations, and also the negative secondary effects of alcohol and drug abuse, and juvenile delinquency that are exacerbated by domestic violence. Karas, 108 Wn. App. at 698-700. Considering this strong public interest in conjunction with the fact that Karas had been given notice of the order, a hearing wherein he could challenge it, and the right to move for a modification of the order and to appeal, the Court held that the absence of discovery was of no concern and did not violate Karas's due process rights. Id. at 698-702.

Karas is instructive in this case. There, the granting of a protection order imposed a legal duty upon Karas not to enter a residence; violation that legal duty was subject to criminal sanctions. Id. at 694. Yet, the Court held that that duty could be constitutionally imposed even absent discovery. Similarly here, it is of no constitutional concern that the anti-SLAPP statute includes a stay of discovery, particularly because the court is granted discretion to allow certain discovery on good cause shown. See RCW 4.24.525(5)(c). Forcing SLAPP plaintiffs to come forth early in the case with evidence to support their claim before the "war of attrition" that is discovery begins does not violate the constitutional rights of a plaintiff. It serves to preserve the rights of the defendant.

C. RCW 4.24.525's fee-shifting and mandatory damages provisions do not violate the rights of petition or of access to the courts because there is no right to bring a meritless lawsuit.

RCW 4.24.525 is a constitutional mechanism for disposing of speech-repressive lawsuits expeditiously and efficiently, created through a validly enacted statute, and the fee-shifting and sanctioning provisions do not violate the First Amendment right to petition. While the right to petition through access to the courts is a core protection of the First Amendment, that right does not go so far as to embrace “illegal and reprehensible practice[s] which may corrupt the...judicial proces[s].” BE & K Constr. Co. v. NLRB, 536 U.S. 516, 525-26 (2002) (quoting California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 513 (1972)) (internal quotations omitted). The right to file a lawsuit is not absolute, and laws which stiffen the burden of proof in order to weed out meritless suits are constitutional.

Petitioners assert that RCW 4.24.525 deters plaintiffs from accessing courts and violates their right to petition the government for redress of grievances. In many ways, these alternative constitutional roots are different articulations of the same argument. The constitutional basis for the right of access to courts is multi-dimensional, having been rooted in a number of constitutional provisions.⁶ But whatever its constitutional anchor, right of access cases fall into one of two categories, neither of which encompass this case. The first involves “claims that systemic official action frustrates a plaintiff or plaintiff class in preparing and filing suits at the present time.” Christopher v. Harbury, 536 U.S. 403, 412-13 (2002). These cases involved, for example, financial barriers to prisoners or indigents in navigating the legal system. See, e.g., Smith v. Bennett, 365 U.S. 708, 713-14 (1961) (filing fees for habeas petitions). The second category includes legal claims which “cannot now be tried (or tried with all material evidence), no matter what official action may be in the future.” Harbury, 536 U.S. at 413-14. These cases tend to involve official misconduct which impairs a plaintiff’s ability to gather evidence for her claim. See, e.g., Foster v. Lake Jackson, 28 F.3d 425, 429 (5th Cir. 1994) (public officials’ abuse of discovery in civil litigation against them does not violate clearly established right for qualified immunity purposes). RCW 4.24.525 falls into neither of these categories.

⁶ See, e.g., Chambers v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 207 U.S. 142, 148 (1907) (Privileges and Immunities Clause); Bill Johnson’s Restaurants, Inc. v. NLRB, 461 U.S. 731, 741 (1983) (the First Amendment Petition Clause); Murray v. Giarratano, 492 U.S. 1, 11, n. 6 (1989) (plurality opinion) (the Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause); Pennsylvania v. Finley, 481 U.S. 551, 557 (1987) (the Fourteenth Amendment Equal Protection Clause); Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539, 576 (1974) (Due Process Clause).

To the contrary, the United States Supreme Court has recognized in both the antitrust and labor relations areas that meritless lawsuits are outside the scope of the Petition Clause. See California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 511 (1972) (recognizing that the antitrust laws can prohibit anticompetitive “sham” lawsuits); Bill Johnson’s Restaurants, Inc. v. NLRB, 461 U.S. 731, 743 (1983) (National Labor Relations Board may enjoin a state lawsuit as an unfair labor practice if the litigation lacked a reasonable basis in fact or law). Indeed, the conceptual predecessor of the anti-SLAPP defense is often considered to be antitrust law’s Noerr-Pennington doctrine. See Michael Johnson, A Better SLAPP Trap: Washington State’s Enhanced Statutory Protection for Targets of “Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation”, 38 GONZ. L. REV. 263, 269-73, 274-75 (2003). In Eastern Railroad Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127 (1961), the Supreme Court declined to find that the Sherman Act prohibited a coalition of railroad companies, enlisting the help of a public relations firm, from lobbying the Pennsylvania legislature to pass legislation which would benefit railroads at the expense of truckers. To do so, particularly absent an indication of congressional intent to apply the antitrust laws to political activity, would implicate the constitutional petition right. See id. at 137-38. However, the Court expressly reserved the possibility that a campaign ostensibly aimed at petitioning the government could in fact be nothing more than a “mere sham” to cover anticompetitive activity which the Sherman Act could in fact reach. Id. at 144. The holding of Noerr was affirmed in United Mine Workers of America v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 670 (1965) (“Joint efforts to influence public officials do not violate the antitrust laws even though intended to eliminate competition.”).

The Supreme Court expounded upon the non-absolute nature of the petition once more in California Motor Transport, where the Court wrote that the Petition Clause does not necessarily entail immunity from the antitrust laws. 404 U.S. at 513-14. The Court noted that the petition right necessarily includes the right of access to the courts. Id. at 612. But the Court nonetheless recognized that “First Amendment rights may not be used as the means or the pretext for achieving ‘substantive evils’ ... which the legislature has the power to control.” Id. at 515 (quoting NAACP v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 444 (1963)) (internal citations omitted). And the Court went further, noting that “[i]t is well settled that First Amendment rights are not immunized from regulation when they are used as an integral part of conduct which violates a valid statute.” Id. at 514 (citing Giboney v. Empire Storage Co., 336 U.S. 490 (1949)). It does not follow that simply because lawsuits as a general proposition fall within the ambit of the Petition Clause, that there is a parallel protection for meritless lawsuits. “Just as false statements are not immunized by the First Amendment right to freedom of speech, baseless litigation is not immunized by the First Amendment right to petition.” Bill Johnson’s Restaurants, 461 U.S. at 743 (internal citations omitted).

Courts have upheld as constitutional far more drastic limitations on the ability to file a lawsuit than that presented here. California, Texas, and Hawaii have all implemented vexatious litigant statutes, which generally limit the ability to file lawsuits of plaintiffs known to have a history of making frivolous claims. In California, a defendant can move to have a plaintiff declared a vexatious litigant if the plaintiff has, among other things, filed in propria persona in the last seven years five lawsuits which have been resolved against him, or unjustifiably remain pending for at least two years without trial or hearing. Cal. Code Civ. Pro. § 391.1(b)(1). If the court determines that a plaintiff is vexatious and that “there is no reasonable probability that the plaintiff will prevail in the [current] litigation,” the court “shall” order the plaintiff to provide security in an amount to be determined by the court. Id. §391.3. If the plaintiff does not furnish security, the case is dismissed. Id. §391.4. The defendant can make this motion “at any time” in the litigation, including prior to discovery. Id. §391.1. This law has been held not to violate the right to petition. See Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694, 703-705 (Cal. App. 1997) (“[T]he vexatious litigant statute does not impermissibly ‘chill’ the right to petition and does not ‘penalize’ the filing of unsuccessful, colorable suits.”). Texas and Hawaii have similar vexatious litigant statutes. See Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code Ann. §§ 11.001-11.104 (2013); Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§634J-1 – 634J-7 (LexisNexis 2014).⁷

It should be noted that, if the Court does open the door to challenging Washington’s anti-SLAPP law, the standard for examining the law should be whether there is a rational basis for the statute, as it was when the Ninth Circuit analyzed the California vexatious litigant statute discussed above. See Wolfe v. George, 486 F.3d 1120, 1125 (9th Cir. 2007). Contrary to what the Court of Appeals suggested in Akrie, 178 Wn. App. at 513 n. 8, the standard should not be strict scrutiny. As this Court has held on numerous occasions, mirroring the United States Supreme Court’s standard of review, “[a] law that does not interfere with fundamental rights and liberty interests is subject to rational basis review.” Am. Legion Post No. 149 v. Dep’t of Health, 164 Wn.2d 570, 32 P.3d 1016 (2008) (applying rational basis review to a statute barring smoking in a place of employment). As discussed above, RCW 4.24.525 does not interfere with the right to petition or access to the courts. Nor does it discriminate based on viewpoint — its protections against meritless litigation are content-neutral. This Court has repeatedly held that “[c]ontent-based restrictions on speech are presumptively unconstitutional and are thus subject to strict scrutiny.” See Collier v. City of Tacoma, 121 Wn.2d 737, 748-49, 854 P.2d 1046 (1993). RCW 4.24.525 is not susceptible to interpretations that it either interferes with fundamental rights or imposes content-based restrictions on speech. Rational basis is the correct standard of review.

⁷ Hawaii’s law is in fact arguably more restrictive because it requires that a judge dismiss a lawsuit with prejudice if the vexatious plaintiff fails to furnish security. Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. §634J-5.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, amici respectfully request that this Court hold the Washington anti-SLAPP law constitutional.

Respectfully submitted this 5th day of December, 2014.

By: /s/ Jessica L. Goldman
Jessica Goldman, WSBA #21856
Summit Law Group, PLLC
/s/ Bruce D. Brown
Bruce D. Brown, D.C. Bar #457317
Executive Director, The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press
Attorneys for Amici Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

The undersigned attorney certifies that a true copy of the foregoing pleading was served upon the following individuals:

Via Email and U.S. Mail Robert M. Sulkin Avi J. Lipman Barbara H. Schuknecht McNaul Ebel Nawrot & Helgren PLLC 600 University St Ste 2700 Seattle, WA 98101 rsulkin@mcnaul.com alipman@mcnaul.com bschuknecht@mcnaul.com	Via Email and U.S. Mail Bruce E.H. Johnson Angela C. Galloway Ambika K. Doran Davis Wright Tremaine LLP 1201 Third Avenue, Suite 2200 Seattle, Washington 98101-3045 brucejohnson@dwt.com angelagalloway@dwt.com ambikadoran@dwt.com
---	--

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of Washington that the foregoing is true and correct.

DATED in Seattle, Washington, this 5th day of December, 2014.

/s/ Jessica L. Goldman
Jessica L. Goldman, WSBA #21856
Summit Law Group PLLC
315 Fifth Avenue South, Ste. 1000
Seattle, WA 98104
jessicag@summitlaw.com
(206) 676-7000